I have it, and desire to be at unity
 * * * I entreat true peace
 Of you, my noble cousin Eucharist
 If ever any grudge were lodged betwixt
 Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey
 That all with love desert have frown'd
 Dukes, carls, lords, gentlemen, in
 I do not know that Englishmen all
 With whom my soul is any jot at

Witness Arkansas, witness Fort Pillow, to all coming to the aid of that the people of the South, defend their accursed slave system, carrying bloody struggle like demons!

If they failed to reduce to ashes the principal Northern cities by the torrid explosion of dynamite, or to spread loathsome contagions at the North by an epidemic of pestilence, it was only as they failed to reduce to ashes their treasonable purposes generated by the contempt for the people of the North.

Let them speak for themselves:

"We have got to hating ever the prefix free—free farms, free society, free will, free thinking, free and free schools, all belong to the of damnable ism. But the worst abominations is the New England free schools that have turned her Sodoms and Gomorrah." •

"Lincoln's government is a deed of hellish perfidy, of atrocious and damning infamy, to accomplish which Abe Lincoln is a fit successsor to the title of the cruel king who shed the blood of the infant Jesus." * * * vis is the very soul of courage, aljry; Lincoln is a cowardly sneaky; aljry fear, drunk half the time, foolishly facetious, whistling to keep his age up. * * * "We doubt if since Sodom and Gomorrah have more thoroughly steeped in evil."

"Let us prefer even for our beloved channel house as a home, than servitude to a nation already in contempt of the civilized world."

"Well, let them come—those of the North. We'll meet them in the least expect; we'll gut our warriors their beastly carcasses, and leave the bones to enrich our soil."

"To be conquered in open and in the nation of gentlemen, and subjected to the sway, might not drive us raving with rage and shame; but for you, most contemptible and detestable creation—the vile wretches whose

tenance consists in the refusal of a people for they eat nothing that a will buy—for them to lord it over English language must be ennobled words must be invented, to ex- tent and depth of our feelings of and shame.

We must bring these enfranchised back to their true condition. They very properly, looked upon them as social inferiors—as our serfs. They has all the characteristics of a fer- vile insurrection. They have been of servitude, and are running riot than the brutal passions of a lion or a beast. We must restore them to

"There were many in the North Greeley in his work, "who demanded too generous in fixing Lee's capitulation; but their heresies were drowned in the general gladness and thanksgiving over the collapse of the Rebellion." And to illustrate the noble spirit of the conquering party, he says that Confederates took their way severally to their respective homes, many of the

It was Andrew Johnson of Tennessee, successor of the martyred Lincoln as a Northern man, who said, "The people must be taught to know that treason is a crime, and punished as a crime. It must not as a mere difference of political opinion be overlooked and forgiven, but must be excused as an unpardonable crime, and must be overlooked and forgiven as a crime before which all other crimes are insignificant; and, in fact, must not be considered that a

Only some of the most prominent have been deprived of the office under the Government, the right to vote; and these are a very insignificant number.
